Paper Information

The Unloved Children Mauden Cauffield and Teddy, two of JD Salinger's characters, are children who try to fit into the American culture world by acting above their age, masking their fear and loss of innocence in their life with a confident intelligence. Unfortunately, this imaginary world unravels in both stories and reveals that the children's facade cannot hide their deep depression. The development of an alter ego in the children is due to the lack of parental love and attention in their lives and the confusion and depression this causes. The alter ego is an attempt to deal with their problems and helps them continue to live in the modern world. Teddy an intelligent 10 year old boy either develops a mystical perspective or he is a con artist. His parents who, as is evident in the story, have a bad relationship that causes psychological damage in their son and daughter or he is an enlightened master. If the former is the case,

Paper Text

Teddy has reacted defensively to an exploitative adult world by intuitively developing the persona of the mystic and clairvoyant both to gain the love he desperately needs and, paradoxically, to distance himself from his uncaring family and the grown-up world.

Teddy tried to deal with this problem, and through the story shows an obsessive attraction to death and the metaphysics behind it. The beginning of the story.
