This is an invited talk I gave last year at a workshop on "Deep Learning for Vision". It discusses some of the history of graphical models and neural networks and speculates on the future of both fields with examples from the particular problem of image restoration.