Subsidized Personal Counseling Services for Students and Postdocs

General
Graduate studies and postdoctoral training at the Weizmann Institute are a period of significant personal and professional development for students. During this time students must face many challenges and make meaningful decisions about many important issues. This period has the potential to lead to tension and personal and interpersonal difficulties.

About the Service
Student and Postdoc counseling services at the Weizmann Institute are designed to offer psychological help and support for students dealing with issues of academic pressures, relocation, conflicts with supervisors, personal crises in life, interpersonal relationships, career choices, and more.

Duration
The service is intended for short-term intervention in a crisis (with a duration ranging from a few meetings to several months).

Service Provider
Counseling is done by a clinical psychologist and is provided on the campus of the Faculty of Agriculture, adjacent to the Weizmann Institute.

Confidentiality
Confidentiality is guaranteed for every call. Information will be transferred to a third party only on request and written consent of the applicant.
